

This issue is about competition, if the satellite radio stations can do it better and attract more customers than we all gain. If they are restricted, and the NAB is the only option. than the customer loses out. The only thing that makes this country great is competition, trying to do it better than the other guy. When this happens the best product wins, and the customer comes out ahead. By shutting out satellite radio, the NAB's don't have to get better to stay in business. The status quo is good enough. In this case the loser is the customer - he doesn't have an option. Please give satellite radio the right to transmit local traffis and weather info.

Craig Pfingsten